Imagine Poison Needles
Allenby of Palestine
Hands Against Machines

Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., kidnapped Mrs. Stoll and hit her on the head with an iron pipe to "quiet her," collected $50,000 ransom and finds himself in jail, serving a life sentence, just sixty hours after his arrest. The kidnaper eagerly pleaded guilty, knowing that under the existing law, having used violence, he might be sentenced to death.

More cases of "nasty hours between arrest and life imprisonment" would discourage the crime wave.

What appeals to the imagination impresses us. Tell us "500,000 will die of heart disease, so many other hundreds of thousands of cases of cancer, tuberculosis, etc., this year," we pay no attention. Millions in China are killed by famine, plague, floods; China pays little attention, the outside world none at all.

But rumors spread in Chungking, in Szechwan province, that assassins are circulating in the crowded streets, "stabbing people with poisoned needles, many already dead." Hysteria seizes that region of Western China. Death by poisoned needle is new, and new things shock the mind.

London sends news of the death, at 75, of Lord Allenby, who conquered Palestine in the big war, took it from the Turks, and England tried to restore it to its rightful owners, the Jewish people. Unfortunately, the restoration is not yet a complete success.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency sends word that many Jews are "evacuated" from the old city of Jerusalem by British police, transferring the Jews for their protection, to a safer locality.

"Many Jews closed their doors in Jaffa street" * * * 140 Jews "evacuated from the section over night" * * * British policeman killed an Arab at the Jaffa gate. Arabs outnumber Jews in Palestine more than two to one, and England, holding the Palestine mandate, has not finished her task there.

The Philippines Herald year book presents the "labor saving machinery problem" in two pictures: first, a long row of men and women planting stalks of rice by hand, one at a time; second, a great American machine, built in the United States, harvesting rice. It ties the straw in bundles, puts the rice in bags, weighs it, loads it on trucks.

A man planting rice stalks, bending over for twelve hours a day, earns perhaps two cents an hour.

The mechanic operating the big machine works eight hours, makes a dollar and half an hour, has helpers in proportion. The human race must take its choice. Some do not want to go back to planting stalks of corn, by hand, one at a time, and say: "I'll have with a scythe, or by hand with a knife, as they still do in the island of Java."

It need not be a complicated problem, at least for this country. Let the people boy more, earn more, own more, spend more, consume more, and the labor-saving machinery, and make hours of labor shorter, increased leisure, would be to use the increased leisure profitably. That would come, slowly.

Dr. Eckener, flying 3900 miles in his dirigible Hindenburg, from Lakehurst, New Jersey, to Frankfurt, Germany, in 40 hours, is ignored by the Nazi government on his arrival, the speech of congratulation addressed to Eckener's assistant, Commander Lehmann.

Dr. Eckener is the world's greatest dirigible expert, and by no means the greatest admirer of Nazism, which explains matters.

All this would be good news for this country if Dr. Eckener, would settle here, and the world's only adequate supply of hydrogen gas at his disposal, and show us how to make that monopoly useful.

Within a week the French government has lost nearly two hundred million dollars' worth of gold; that worries France almost as much as the financial monopoly advance to the edge of the Rhine.

Siam owns a great treasure, a real tooth from the mouth of Prince Gautama, who founded the Buddhist religion. Once a year that tooth goes for a ride in a golden howdah on the back of an elephant, while everybody bows to the tooth. Siam would call it a great disaster if that tooth should disappear, although it seems queer to us.

France loses a big lump of dynamite and gets a great quantity, although nobody knows WHY. It does not diminish French wealth, intelligence, industry or power. Hence, another noted pilot.

Girl Hurlled Out Window in Fire

London sends news of the death, at 75, of Lord Allenby, who conquered Palestine in the big war, took it from the Turks, and England tried to restore it to its rightful owners, the Jewish people. Unfortunately, the restoration is not yet a complete success.

Miss Lillian Zander, 21, was injured today during a $70,000 fire in Clinton. She was hurt from a three-story window by the force of a hot-air explosion. A sign over the first floor broke her fall and saved her from possible death. She is shown at the Clinton Hospital.

Maniac Hunted in $170,000 Fires

Three persons, one a girl, were seriously hurt and damage estimated at $170,000 was caused by two general alarm fires, believed to have been set by a maniac, in Fitchburg and Clinton today.

Indication the Fires were the work of a mad incendiary caused assignment of state troopers from the Lunenburg barracks to a widespread hunt through northern Worcester County for the perpetrator.

BLACK LOBBY PETITION BRANDED AS CONSPIRATORS

BRIEF DENOUNCES SEIZURE OF PRIVATE TELEGRAMS

Washington, May 15 (US)—Denouncing as "odious and reprehensible" the whole filching of private telegrams by the Black lobby committee of the Senate, counsel for William Randolph Hearst yesterday petitioned the federal courts to condemn the practice.

The action was in the form of a reply brief to that filed by Senator Black (D., of Alabama, and his four colleagues on the Senate committee, against whom the publisher is demanding an injunction.

Black is seeking to prevent an injunction with the argument that the courts have no jurisdiction. Yesterday's brief, filed by Attorney Elkins Hanson, declared:

"These five men have come into conflict with the superior power of the Constitution, and this petitioner respectfully submits that the courts have power to strip them of their representative and official character and make them answer in their individual capacities."

The lower court held it was without jurisdiction to interfere with the Senate probers, notwithstanding admission by the publisher's communications commission that the telegraph catching is illegal.

SPECIAL APPEAL

Mr. Hearst now is asking the U. S. court of appeals for the District of Columbia to entertain a special appeal on the jurisdictional question in order to make a decision and to insure against further violation of constitutional rights.

Hanson noted that a telegraph message from the publisher to one of his editors had been illegally turned over to a member of the House of Representatives, who, under the cloak of congressional immunity, then proceeded to "make a violent and virulent attack upon" the publisher. He explained:

"Petitioner has taken every proper step to protect his constitutional rights. But these steps have not protected him.

"ODIOUS ACT"

"The action of respondents (Black committee) is a constituent's admission on their part that the seizing and use of this paper had no legitimate legislative purpose. The act was unprecedented as well as odious, reprehensible and illegal."

The single question now, Hanson declared, is whether the judicial branch of the government has power to protect a citizen from the violation of his constitutional rights "by five men who for the

Bolt Threat Voiced by Borah

Newark, N. J., May 15 (US)—Plain speaking that he will bolt the Republican party if the "Old Guard" nomination is made, the platform and name the candidate at the Cleveland convention, said Borah yesterday.

The veteran Western Senator has carried his fight for the G. O. P. presidential nomination into New Jersey, with an appeal for liberalization of his own party and a slashing attack on monopolies.

Addressing an audience of 1000 here, Borah declared:

"Unless there is a change in leadership and a liberalization, there is no chance for the Republican party to win next November."

He called for the repeal of the G. O. P. assembly in New York as a sample of the leadership that has led the Republican party to the confidence of the man and woman of the country, and added:

"If this ultra-conservative reactionary Old Guard controls the Cleveland convention, seven million who left the party in 1932 will not only refuse to return, but they'll take several more with them."

"These gentlemen may control the convention but they don't control the votes of the American people."

His investigation for any legislative purpose. Even so they made an illegal use of that power. It is the settled jurisprudence of this country that if there is any participation whatsoever of federal officers in obtaining papers illegally and the court will inquire into the matter with care—such papers are not admissible in any proceeding under federal jurisdiction."

UNLAWFUL SEIZURE

By unlawful seizure and seizure, "conspiracy to pervert" the communications law, and failure to obtain a valid subpoena, the Black committee has "taken" information, it was charged.

Granting of the special appeal, Hanson said:

"Will make possible an early and final determination of the question of the jurisdiction of the United States Senate guilty of open and notorious, flagrant and reprehensible violations of the liberties of a citizen as secured and guaranteed by the Constitution."

"In combination with the members of the federal communications commission, in defiance of law, without even a semblance of due process, they have seized the private papers of this petitioner relating to his business as a publisher."

"Insofar as one of these papers is admitted, it was not pertinent to the case."

Governor Landon's Principles MODERATION

MR. KALTENBORN: Governor, just who and what do you think will decide the coming election?

Governor Landon: Mr. Kaltenborn, if the coming election is going to be genuinely beneficial to America, it should be decided by the common sense of the average man and woman—by the moderates among us rather than by the extremists on either side. They would like to believe that a public man can be liberal without squandering their money.—From Mr. Kaltenborn's radio interview with Governor Landon, of Kansas, on May 8.

IN Governor Landon's answer to this question there lies the keen perception of the whole genius of American political civilization—a belief in the COMMON SENSE of the average man, the love of MODERATION and the inherent fear of our people of EXTREMES of any kind.

This moderation is found in a more perfect balance in the political and personal character of the Governor of Kansas than in any man now active on the American political scene.

He knows the difference between LIBERALITY and SQUANDERING, as he knows the difference between "LIBERALISM" and RED AND PINK DOCTRINES.

THE coming election will be WON by the votes of the overwhelming majority of these MODERATE AMERICANS.

There is the profound and moving faith in the traditional, stabilizing character of the American people expressed in the simple language of Governor Landon that can—and WILL—move mountains of blunders away.

Kate Smith Backs Song Contest

New York, May 15.—"I'm taking sides in your national song-writing contest," Boston. Like Rudy Vallee, Irving Berlin, and the professionals along Tin Pan Alley are my friends, and I know they'll be with me in wishing that the amateurs in this journey of melody will get the breaks and be the prize winners."

A copy of the characteristic message from Kate Smith was received today by the man keeping tab on the mounting entries in the Boston Herald's song-writing contest of the Hearst newspapers.

Like Rudy Vallee, Irving Berlin, Johnny Green and other authorities on song hits, Miss Smith believes the competition provides an unrivaled chance for amateur composers to win national recognition.

Remember, two regional cash prizes of $100 each and two national cash prizes of $200 each are being offered for the best music for two ballads and two songs.

Rudy Vallee will sit on the National Board of Judges, which will be made up of some of the foremost song writers and orchestra leaders in the country. Their names will be announced in a few days.

The rules of the contest are published in full each Sunday and at frequent intervals. Entries of amateur composers as well as self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelopes for free reprints of "Just You" the first ballad for which a melody is sought, should be addressed as follows:

Boston Herald, Ballad Editor, Boston Herald, Boston, Mass.

Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.

For this honor, the names of Governor Bridges of New Hampshire, Henry Breckinridge, Congressman Wadsworth of New York, and other notable names are being mentioned.

Within the past few days, however, a quiet boom has started in the northeastern states for Colonel Arthur Little of the New York publishing firm of Ives and Little.

Plans are underway for Little dinners in all New England states.

"Although the movement for nomination of Governor Landon at the June 24 primary election was endorsed by Governor Landon, it is not the policy of the club to endorse any candidate for Governor."

In addition to the comments I have received, several straw votes taken in separate communities at different points in New York city, indicate a sweeping popular endorsement of Governor Landon.

G. O. P. VICTORY DINERS TO LARGE LONDON VOTE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Resolutions backing the stand of the Landon for President Club of Somerville and urging Massachusetts delegates and alternates to the Republican National Convention to vote for Governor Landon for the nomination for President of the United States will be adopted next Monday night by Republican members of the legislature at the Hotel Touraine victory dinner to Representative Charles W. Hedges of Quincy.

Similar action will be taken by other Republican organizations to impress upon state delegates that the more than 80 per cent preference shown for the Kansas in the April 23 primary cannot be otherwise interpreted than as a clear mandate from party voters.

Court Clerk George Olson of Brockton, winning Landon tickets with Hedges over the Richardson district state, will attend the dinner.

MARTIN TO ATTEND Another special guest will be Congressman Joseph Martin of North Attleboro, who is slated to succeed John Richardson of Canton as Republican national committeeman.

On the same night Congressman Martin is being tendered a testimonial dinner in Fall River. Now that it appears settled that Governor Landon will be chosen, interest is being displayed as to his running mate.

Landon School Talk to Fill Kansas Town

Attica, Kas., May 15 (US)—The busiest man in the little village of Attica today was George ("Pat") Crowell.

Having persuaded Governor Landon to make the commencement address next Monday night for the Attica High school graduating class, the responsibility fell on him to make preparations for the large crowd it soon was evident would flock here.

Crowell, a canteen of the Governor's at the University of Kansas, said during a moment of rest today:

"This all started out to be just an ordinary commencement, except that we were to have as the distinguished speaker the Governor of Kansas. Then I began hearing that a lot of folks were coming in from the outside."

"I don't know where we would put them all. There wasn't a hall in town big enough. Finally we decided on the high school athletic field."

"We were notified today that delegations coming from Alva and Cherokee in Oklahoma and from Wichita, Hutchinson and Medicine Lodge, Kas., in addition to other contingents of which we have been advised previously."

Crowell's 17-year-old son, who is a member of the graduating class, it was this that led Crowell to call up his old friend, Governor Landon, several weeks ago and ask him to make the commencement address.

Landon agreed. Because of the press of state business he will come part way by air, flying Monday from the capital at Topeka to Wichita and coming the remainder of the distance by automobile.

Attica is 75 miles southwest of Wichita, near the Oklahoma state line. Landon will return to Topeka by train.

His address will be carried on a national hookup by the National Broadcasting Company from 8 to 8:30 central standard time.

The school board will act as the reception committee for the governor. He will be introduced by J. R. Linschied, superintendent of the Attica high school.

MARRY? WELL, MAYBE LATER

By PEGGY DOYLE

Rudy Valle, whose million-dollar crown has more authority on the air-wave than in his own dove-cote, isn't going to marry Judy Stewart—or anybody else—at least for the next three or four years.

And when he does marry, the girl must have plenty of everything, including a touch of the clinging vine, a soupcon of the maternal type, great gobs of beauty, considerable dash in wearing gorgeous clothes, and, above all, 100 per cent companionability.

In his dressing-room at the Metropolitan, where he and his Connecticut Yankee opened today, Rudy talked about Rudy, women and marriage with amazing naïveté.

Not in Love

"Of course," he said, with an expected directness, "you're going to ask me about my divorce and Judy Stewart."

"Well, I'm not saying a syllable about the divorce. And about Judy Stewart, well, there's not a thing in that story that broke in New York. It's true she was my guest, with a group of other friends, at my camp on Lake Umbagog, Maine. And she was a young New York newspaperwoman who admires Rudy and is eager to give him some publicity—and thereby hangs the tale."

Yes, you, Mister Valle, but is there anybody else in your mind's eye?

"Absolutely not, most emphatically not. Right this minute I don't know a girl I desire to marry. Frankly, I don't contemplate marriage for some time, for the next three or four years, to be exact."

Rudy was reminded that he had dated—even after his break with his former wife and the subsequent unpleasant publicity—that to him Fay Webb Valle represented the ideal type of feminine beauty.

"I guess I've got over the type idea," he reasoned, carefully, "I'm growing up. I guess so. What do I see in the girl I marry?"

"Companionship, above all things. The only thing I ever asked of my wife she denied me. That was companionship. The thing that ruffled me keenly when anything else in that unfortunate experience was her failure to be a companion. That was the only thing I married her for. I never got it for an instant."

"When, and if, I marry again I'll ask of the woman I marry to be that she look her loveliest always and be happy looking lovely for me and that she give me companionship in my moments of leisure."

Perhaps a woman aside, that how he is currently bracketed with.

"Age," says Rudy, and definitely on "dawn" enter into it. And I wouldn't say she must be the clinging-vine type, nor would I want her to assume the maternal attitude. I wouldn't want her to be too self-sufficient."

All the Same

"Rather, I'd want her to look to me for the decision as well as for the whereabout. I think most women prefer it that way. The women I talk with do."

"As I have said, I do not care for the maternal type although I think every truly feminine, loving woman has in her makeup a maternal tenderness for the man she loves. And I would wish that quality in the woman I make my wife."

But speaking of marriage and women and Rudy, this fabulously successful young man with the curl in his hair and the tilt in his hair-comb confesses that he's not now nor ever has been particularly eager to marry.

"I've lots of hard work ahead of me," he said, "and while I know there are lots of women who'd share with me the long hours of leisure when I dream out my program, marriage is not in my plans for at least three or four years. Perhaps never."

Right there Rudy uttered a bit mournful about how much beautiful things as God's sunshine, salt and diamonds frequently alienated rather than insured love.

It was suggested that the next time he might better choose a cooed-in preference to an orchidaceous beauty.

"Under the cactus they're all the same," said Rudy to that, with a great air of sagacity.

His own cactus, incidentally, boys and girls, is taking on a rich, coffee-with-a-salt-of-caramel tint. Bermuda. Don't be so, it comes out of a little electric god.

Rudy loves gadgets. Well, two minutes' play of this gadget on the face and your tan will rival any tan's who's been having an entire afternoon conference with a golf ball.

KISSES Denied by WRITER

PEIRCE LOVE SUIT WITNESS

Miss Josephine Lagerquist, writer and editor, defendant in the Peirce $100,000 alienation of affections suit, stood the stand in her own defense in Dedham court today.

The suit brought by Mrs. M. Vivian Pierce of Brookline charges the writer stole the affections of her late husband Edward Pierce, steamship company president.

Miss Lagerquist testified she met Peirce aboard ship in 1911 when she was editor of Textile Review, a trade magazine.

Four years later, she said, Peirce was elected to the board of directors of the magazine.

Met on Trip

In 1916, the woman testified, she met Peirce again at Hartford, Conn., "while we were on our way to New York on a business trip."

"On our arrival in New York, we went to a hotel," Miss Lagerquist testified. "I did not register with Mr. Peirce, washed and re-packed my bag."

"I left the hotel at 8 p. m. and went to Jersey City, New Jersey, where I stayed overnight. The next morning, I returned to New York."

"I saw Mrs. Peirce sitting in a bathtub outside the hotel. I didn't see her face, but I was able to recognize her by her legs."

"I went in and had breakfast in the public dining room of the hotel with Mr. Peirce. We then went upstairs to his room so that I could get my grip which I had left there."

Wife Appears

"The maid was making up the bed. The door of the room was open. Mr. Pierce went into the bathroom."

"Then Mrs. Pierce walked into the room with a detective. This is Miss Lagerquist," she told the detective. Mr. Pierce walked out of the bathroom and Mrs. Pierce said to the detective, "This is my husband."

"Mr. Peirce and I returned to Boston that afternoon. Miss Lagerquist denied that she made frequent visits to Peirce's apartment."

DEATH Pens Tragedy FINIS

DOCTOR, SHOT BY NURSE, DIES

New York, May 15 (AP)—Death wrote the concluding chapter today in the weird love tragedy of Dr. Milton Thomashefsky, who five years ago was shot by a pretty young nurse after she previously was accused of having performed a mutilating operation on him.

Dr. Thomashefsky, who was a dashing young Brooklyn surgeon five years ago, died last night from the effects of the bullet wound which splintered his spine and left him an invalid.

The nurse, Agnes Birdseye, who had been employed in his office, died of a self-inflicted bullet wound a short time after the doctor was shot.

Police reports of the shooting, which was a local sensation at the time, said Miss Birdseye and Dr. Thomashefsky had been in love and that the nurse attacked him in a rage because of attentions he had shown another woman.

Hoover's 4-Point Program

Urges Raw Deal Foes to Unite

Philadelphia, May 15 (US)—In a ringing appeal to the women of America, former President Herbert Hoover last night laid before the Republican women of Pennsylvania a proposed four-point foundation for the Republican platform to be drafted at Cleveland in June.

Declaring that to expose the so-called "New Deal" is not enough, the former President declared that the Republican party must place before the voters a definite program that will call forth support both from Republicans and Democrats who have become disgusted with the Administration's broken promises.

This program, he asserted, must include:
1—A restoration of morale in government.
2—A revival of confidence and courage in the destiny of America.
3—Real policies of economic and social regeneration in place of the New Deal extravaganzas.
4—Rational, drastic, and immediate reforms.

The Real Issue

The former President spoke feelingly of the irony of holding the Democratic convention 60 days hence in this city, where American liberty was born. He said:

"I trust these gentlemen will have their heads before Independence Hall. Under the inviolable presence of the men who founded a nation that liberty might live, they should apologize to the American people."

"The spirits of Washington, Jefferson, Hamilton, Adams, and Franklin may well wonder whence came these men, that they dare to walk in such precincts."

Declaring that the real issue before the American people is the destruction of their freedom by forces that threaten to lead the nation into the alternative pitfalls of Socialism or Fascism, the former President said:

"There are standards of intellectual honesty in government. Framed propaganda and perverted figures mislead the thinking of the people. Pressures upon the press lead down the same dark alley. That is statesmanship, not statesmanship."

"There are standards of gentlemen in government. The seizure by the government of the communications of persons not charged with wrongdoing justifies the immoral conduct of every snoper."

"The President may deny that he intends to travel into cold, ice-filled desert. But his policies are driving the people there. And many of his advisers glory in the progress already made."

There are five horsemen of the New Deal Apocalypse, Hoover declared.—Profligacy, Propaganda, Patronage, Politics and Power. He added:

"There are other names as Pork Barrel, Poppycock, Privilege, Parasitism and Poverty."

Thanks to them, the former President said, after three years the number of unemployed has remained about the same, the farm problem is as big as ever, and the business world is faltering for lack of confidence in the good intentions, the sanity, and the integrity of the federal government.

His Program

Hoover said:

"There are certain steps that should be taken at once."

"This outburst of wasteful expenditure should be stopped. The budget should be balanced. The increase in debt must be ended. The gold standard should be established. These futile purchases of foreign silver should cease. The laws authorizing the President to inflate the currency and to gamble in foreign exchange should be repealed."

"Tinkering with credit inflation must be ended. We must stamp out that train of gunpowder. It leads to an explosion of inflation which itself alone would destroy any democracy."

"Genuine banking reform must be achieved. This horde of political bosses should be driven away. The spoils system should be reformed once and for all."

"The civil service should be reformed."

"Return the administration of relief again to state and local non-partisan committees of leading citizens. Give them such federal subsidy as meets the need of the unemployed."

"Take the favoritism of politics out of the broad of relief. By wise use of tariffs, protect our farmers from this flood of imports. By wise use of subsidies, find employment for our surplus acres in products we can use."

and can export. Restore foreign trade. Take the handoffs of honest business. Stop the attempt to suppress free opinion. Obey the Constitution. Charge it when necessary, but obey it, give us a government of laws and not of men."

"These are but the first moves to get these 12,000,000 people back into productive jobs, to make secure the farmer's livelihood and the ability of business to expand its payroll."

Hoover ridiculed President Roosevelt's recent assertion that reduction of production and distribution costs "does not mean more purchasing power and more goods consumed."

Pointing to the automobile industry as the classic example of the benefits spread by low costs and increased production, Hoover told the nation's women, as prime consumers, that artificial price forcing will cut the buying power of the American home in half.

Concluding, the former President pleaded for restoration of the American ideal of thrift and hard work. Reminding his hearers that America is still a land of opportunity, that the capacity for honest popular achievement has not decreased, asserted:

"Our trouble today is moral as well as economic. It is not time we jerk ourselves out of this, and clean out the high priests of these heresies! Should we not defy a few brain trusts and restore the national virtues of thrift and honor and hard work?"

"Then the greatness of America will shine again."

STARHEMBERG SEEKS AID OF HOME GUARD

Vienna, May 15 (AP)—Provincial followers of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg rallied to the support of the ousted vice chancellor today in his self-declared contest for Austrian supremacy.

"In about a week the world will hear from the 'Heimwehr,'" the Starhemberg leader of one of Austria's private armies, declared last night upon his departure by train for Rome, ostensibly to attend an international football game.

"All my life I have been a fighter and Austria will soon see I am not licked now. The real contest is just starting."

While the prince, who lost his government power in Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's cabinet turnover, was in Rome, a spokesman for his home guard said he would be welcomed upon his return by "reconstructed Heimwehr, awaiting his orders."

MUTTERINGS HEARD

Mutterings among von Starhemberg's provincial adherents became audible and indications arose of the beginning of an under-cover movement, among Heimwehrmen in upper Austria, where the prince launched his career, to make him dictator.

The secret of Austria's future domestic course, informed sources said, rested with the private armies as the extent of von Starhemberg's determination to keep the Heimwehr's control of the army and militia.

The government, recognizing the potential danger of stirring up dissatisfied Heimwehrmen, does not intend to dissolve the private armies immediately, a spokesman said, although a plan has been entertained to combine the militia and the Heimwehr.

RECRUITING STARTS

The regular army strength has been set at 30,000 and the new militia is recruiting some 15,000 youths—all under the chancellor who recently announced demobilization of his own army but took complete command in yesterday's cabinet change.

Von Starhemberg's armed strength is set at 10,000, with 10,000 recruits in his Heimwehr.

The prince's finances have been reduced, however, and informed sources said his support must come from several scores wealthy provincial followers with the theoretical effect of forming that many private armies, loosely joined as the Heimwehr.

Smoking Ruins of $100,000 Blaze In Fitchburg

This photograph shows the smoking ruins of what was until today a two-story building on Thompson street, Fitchburg. The blaze caused damage estimated at $100,000 and threatened the entire city since there are three oil farms located nearby.

The police believe that this fire and a $70,000 blaze in Clinton were both set by a maniac.

MAINE AUTOPSY 3 Persons Injured ORDER SIGNED

Wiscasset, Me., May 15—Counsel for Reuben Brewer is today seeking in two states for a pathologist to make another autopsy on the body of Mrs. Doria Brewer, who will be exhumed Saturday.

Judge George L. Emery issued an order for the exhumation upon the motion of counsel for the defense.

The court also authorized the employment by the defense of a pathologist and a handwriting expert, each at a salary of $50 a day, to be paid by the state.

pushed to the tanks to avert possible explosion.

HUNT FOR FIREBOMB

Fire officials in both cities declared the blazes were suspicious in origin.

State police were notified and adjoining communities were warned to be on the watch for the outbreak of fire.

The first blaze came in Clinton soon after midnight and was discovered by Patrolman Edward Strunk.

When firemen reached the scene they discovered Miss Zander, framed in the window of her home in the third story, where she had been trapped by the flames.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Zander, and three other children made their escape through a rear fire exit in the building. In the confusion the girl was left behind.

Shouting to her to stay where she was, firemen raised a ladder to the window and McNally started to ascend.

When he had covered half the distance every window in the building was blown out by a terrific hair explosion.

BLOWN OUT WINDOW

Firemen and spectators cried out in horror as the girl, literally blown out of the window, plunged to what seemed certain death in the street below. At the same time the ladder, with McNally clinging to it, tipped over backward, flinging him to the ground.

Her burning body struck a large projecting sign of a first floor drug store, breaking her fall and dropping her gently in the street.

Although she injured she was unhurt she was rushed to the hospital and put under observation for possible internal injuries. Attaches at the hospital said she was painfully bruised but apparently had suffered no fractures.

McNally also escaped fractures in his plunge to the ground but was badly cut and bruised.

The Zander family was the only one occupying the building, made up for the most part of stores and offices. The third floor, in addition to the Zander apartment, housed the quarters of Clinton Council, Knights of Columbus.

Valuable records of the organization were destroyed as their quarters were completely wiped out by the flames.

Clinton city documents also were consumed by the flames as they wrecked the second floor office of William P. Constantine, city solicitor.

WIND FANS FLAMES

The Fitchburg blaze was discovered two hours later by John Wilkins of Bartlett street, that city, as he returned to his home from a business trip to Worcester.

This fire also started in the basement of the building and had gained considerable headway by the time it was discovered and firemen had reached the scene.

Valuable stocks of wood were destroyed and the quarters of the Clinton Bar Association, valued at $10,000, were destroyed.

Two families, 12 persons in all, evacuated their homes nearby for a time, but returned when assured by firemen that the flames were under control.

CURLEY BLAMES G. O. P.

The governor himself, in a public statement, attributed the wave of protest to supporters of the Liberty League and Republican leaders.

Defending his own course in the matter, he pointed to the trend in recent years toward letting business in public service at certain ages and said he saw no reason to distinguish between members of the judiciary and other public servants.

Possible stumbling block in the progress of his plan appeared in a bill filed in the House by Representative Thomas Dorgan of Boston.

The bill would require the governor and council to obtain an opinion from the supreme court on the legality and constitutionality of the proposed procedure.

PLAN CALLED "CRUEL"

Latest organizations to join in the protest against the plan were the Boston and Hampden County Bar Associations.

The protest of the former association was drafted in extraordinary session of the body's council at the Parker House last night.

In a withering statement sent to Governor Curley and the council, the proposed plan was characterized as an outrageous "general inquisition" not contemplated by the Constitution and "as cruel as it is offensive to the feelings of every right-minded person."

In Springfield, the Hampden County Bar Association voted 40 to 10 against the governor's plan.

Former Governor Joseph B. Ely, who characterized the plan as "first degree murder" in a bitter attack on Governor Curley yesterday, was in the corridor outside the meeting room.

RUNAWAY GIRLS CAUGHT, POLICE HUNT WOMAN

Three 15-year-old runaway high school girls from Boston were taken into custody in Worcester today and told police a 22-year-old woman, named "Lucille," had given them money to go to New York.

A fourth girl, also 15 and a high school student, left them in Worcester, they said, and presumably continued to the scheduled destination.

The sinister implications in the story of the girls carried immediately caused Worcester authorities to get into communication with Boston.

It was then determined the fourth girl did not return home. New York police were notified, while Boston authorities began a search for "Lucille," who was described as married.

The missing girl lived in South Boston. Her father sought out the principal of the high school today because his daughter had not arrived home last night.

All four children are pupils at the Trade School for Girls, in the Bronx.

Two of those held in Worcester came from East Boston; the third from South Boston.

The said that yesterday the four of them had been caught smoking in the school building and were reprimanded, given orders for their parents and told to bring their parents to the principal's office.

Instead, police said they were informed, the girls wanted to leave and finally met "Lucille."

"The woman, they said, suggested they might go to New York and gave them money for railroad fares. Patrolman Bernard Hutton of Worcester police found the girls alone in the Union station at 3 a. m. today.

They said the fourth girl has continued on and that she had the money. They were without cash.

Boston University will honor Miss Rose Goodenough, assistant United States commissioner of education and national president of the Lambda Theta, honorary fraternity for women in education, at an assembly of the school of education tomorrow.

R. H. WHITE CO.

Brooks of Watertown, one of the three Republican councillors, visited William L. Reed, executive secretary of the council, today, seeking information relative to procedure upon which the governor expects to set in his plan against aged judges.

It was explained in him that the procedure probably will be similar to that in the case of Alexander Lincoln, recently extended chairman of the State Tax Appeal Board, with a hearing first before the governor alone, and a second one before the governor and council.

Meanwhile protests of bar associations, lawyers and citizens against the governor's plan continued to mount—but with little indication that they would have any effect.

3 FACE CHARGE OVER WELFARE COAL SALES

Attorney Robert Robinson, member of the finance commission and former assistant district attorney, conferred with District Attorney William J. Polk relative to indictments against four men in connection with the coal probe, it was learned today by the Boston Evening American.

Although the finance commission member who was active in that body's investigation into charges that "front-end coal" had been furnished Boston welfare recipients would make no statement, it was learned he had asked the district attorney to lay the entire matter before the grand jury.

Details of the finance commission's investigation into the matter are understood to have been given the district attorney and he was promised a transcript of evidence taken at the hearings.

He pleaded guilty to the charge in East Cambridge district court.

WIND WHIPS WATER

Crowd Drenched at Fire Exhibit

In case several hundred Cambridge citizens have been surprised about how it felt to be out while being drenched by fire, they can stop clapping at their misfortune today.

It was the Cambridge firemen's day to demonstrate to the expert and amateur shoppers just how the kiddies can stop clapping at their misfortune today.

But everybody had forgotten to reckon on the wind, which was blowing strong and from the east. It was, indeed, stronger than the stream of water, and it whipped barrels, tons even, of water from the pipes' height back onto the crowd.

Thousands of spectators, who were thoroughly drenched, and the cold wind added greatly to their discomfort. Otherwise the exhibition was a huge success.

Vagrants Hunted in Subway Murder

New York, May 15 (AP)—A roundup of vagrants and other shady characters who lurk in subways was undertaken by police today, as they sought the slayer of Edgar J. Stewart, 31-year-old assistant treasurer of the Rogers Post Company.

Stewart was strangled in the washroom of the Eighth Avenue subway station at Forty-second street.

Edwell was strangled in the washroom of the Eighth Avenue subway station at Forty-second street.

TAYLOR DEATH CASE REVIVED

Los Angeles, May 15—The 14-year-old mystery of the macabre murder of William Desmond Taylor, picture director, was revived today with disclosure of an extensive police hunt for the "key witness," reported news here.

Brought since the day before Taylor's dying on a charge of forgery, Edward F. Sunde, his secretary-shufflefoot, reputed to be the only person who could solve the strange killing of the movie man, was seen at his old haunts at the beach, a friend told police.

"Two picture stars of the time, Mary Miles Minter and Mabel Normand, were questioned in the baffling mystery murder. Both had visited the director on the evening of the slaying."

NEW BEDFORD'S RIFLEMEN WIN HEARST PRIZE

New Bedford, May 15.—William Randolph Hearst trophies were presented today to the five members of the New Bedford High School's rifle team which won first and prize respectively, in competition with 500 other teams.

In addition to beautiful shields, which the high school added to its collection of past years, the five men on the two teams were given an individual medal for their marksmanship.

The occasion signified the third time in ten years that New Bedford had won first prize honors. Its rifle teams have also won second and third ratings repeatedly.

Officiating were C. Walter Williams, principal of the high school, and Captain Louis L. Lester, U. S. A. director of the R. O. C. A. A congratulatory message from Publisher William Randolph Hearst was read by James C. Deering, Boston Evening American representative, who presented the trophies and made the individual awards.

U. S. Aids Search For 2 Lost in Mine

Pittsburgh, May 15 (INS).—Two men trapped or lost in a mine at Passaic, N. J., were being sought today by emergency crews of the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

The men, Arthur Toner, 25, and Robert Dyer, 26, were in the mine, apparently seeking old copper wire, last night at third man Edwin Miller, became frightened and released. He waited outside the mine all night but his two friends failed to reappear.

The men have neither food nor water.

All other entrances but the one found by Toner and Dyer have been sealed. This entrance was once dynamited and sealed also but eaved in later, leaving a "rat hole" about three feet in diameter.

Passengers Taken Off Crippled Ship

Seattle, Wash., May 15 (INS).—Crippled, but with all her passengers safe, and 34 of the original 145 back on board, the S. S. North Sea, which 24 hours ago was feared sinking, limped toward Ketchikan, Alaska, today.

Last night all but 22 of the passengers and 20 members of the crew of the Northland Transportation Company's ship, which was earlier laid abandoned the ship when it developed serious leaks after grounding on Point Barrow, were put back aboard.

This morning the S. S. Victoria, bound to Alaska, the North Sea and 58 passengers arrived at Port Townsend, where they were put over the side of the crippled liner.

Fake Olive Oil Laid to N. Y. Firm

Worcester, May 15.—Charges of a new form of racketeering, wholesale distribution of a fake olive oil in New England, were made in court here today. State Inspector Ernest C. Cloon declared that a New York concern is spreading throughout this section a product that is 30 per cent cottonseed oil.

He said a branch of the racketeer firm is in Providence, and others in principal New England cities. Inspector Cloon's charges came during the trial of Louis Ballestracci, a merchant, who was found guilty of selling "misbranded" olive oil and fined $100 on four charges.

Stevens, Hotel Builder, Dies

Chicago, May 15 (INS).—James W. Stevens, merchant, insurance man, and builder of the world's largest hotel, died in his home here last night.

Once the possessor of unusual wealth, he died in comparative poverty. With the collapse of the Illinois Life Insurance Company, which he founded, he lost a fortune. He would have been 83 years old on May 25.

Indicted last Wednesday by a federal grand jury following a vice investigation in New England, Mrs. Molly Thayer, 43, Westland avenue, was arraigned in Roxbury court today on three vice charges before Judge Albert Heyden.

She was held in $1500 after she had pleaded not guilty. The case was continued until June 10. Bail was furnished.

Women Bear 'R. I. Saint' To Grave

Woonsocket, R. I., May 15.—Women replaced men today as the mourners at the funeral of Rose Ferron, whose body was repatriated to her home in Woonsocket.

Thousands of persons witnessed the funeral and the burial at Holy Family Cemetery.

Since the death of the 22-year-old invalid, Tuesday, more than 15,000 persons had visited the Ferron home in Providence street, to kneel at her bier. Today a crowd of 4,000 gathered outside the house, requiring police reserves to make a path for the bier.

Six women relatives carried the coffin from the house. By special permission, Miss Ferron, in death, wore the veil of the Sisters of the Precious Blood.

Two priests from Canada, another from Fall River and a fourth from Alton, N. Y., assisted Rev. Stephen Gauthier, pastor of Holy Family Church, who celebrated a solemn high mass of requiem.

A large crowd gathered in the street outside the church and also at the cemetery. Rev. Philip Auger of St. Hyacinth, Canada, was deacon.

Rev. John Baptiste Mathew of Woonsocket, Canada, was deacon. Both are cousins of the dead woman. Others inside the sanctuary were Rev. Adrian Gauthier of Fall River and Rev. Orestine Boyer of Alton.

Miss Ferron, formerly a resident of Fall River, was stricken with a spinal ailment in 1918. Physicians could not help her and she awaited death on each Good Friday. Many believed her a living saint.

In his second day in Newton court today Julius P. Bianchi, 28, of Quirk court, Newton, faced considerably worse than he did yesterday.

Bianchi was fined $5 yesterday for driving without a license, $5 for driving without registration and $5 for failing to stop before entering a through way, and was given time to pay.

Today he was sentenced to six months in jail for an alleged assault and was fined $25 for driving without a license and $5 for speeding, with no time for payment.

The latest charge grew out of a benefit Bianchi is alleged to have said he was running for the widow and eight children of his uncle, Antonio Bianchi, Newton, laborer, killed last winter by a truck in Newton's yards.

According to police, Bianchi had 300 tickets printed for a purported benefit party in Columbus Hall, Newton, on April 28, but when ticket purchasers arrived the hall was dark.

PWA LIES ON SMALLER SCALE

Washington, May 15 (AP).—President Roosevelt said today that the public relief and restoration administration would be continued on a smaller scale under the pending $1,425,000,000 work relief appropriation.

Responding to questions at his press conference, the President said that the President's Public Works Administration projects which have been carried out by the Federal Works Agency in the past week had been reduced to 50 per cent of the funds to be used for the labor, he said, while the 50 per cent loan would come out of PWA's revolving fund.

The President said that the agency still had quite a large revolving fund available for loans through Reconstruction Corporation sale of municipal securities, the proceeds of which are turned over to PWA.

HEARING DELAYED

The relief fund is to be the 2384-22,712 deficiency appropriation bill now before the Senate appropriations committee. It was scheduled to testify today, but the committee session was postponed until this afternoon.

The committee has before it demands that funds go back to Federal public works organization and Reconstruction Corporation, the proceeds of which are turned over to PWA.

TRANSFER FUNDS

The President emphasized that municipal projects must conform to the requirement that workers be taken from relief rolls. He said PWA would certify how many men were needed for a particular job and PWA would certify to see if such workers were available in the locality. If so, PWA would approve the project and pay the weekly payroll.

The President said funds would be allocated from the relief appropriation to carry on three or four phases of the agency's work.

Nurse Attack Laid To Guilt Slayer

Chicago, May 15 (INS).—In a savage attack upon a young woman in a nurse's home, the fugitive murderer of Mrs. Lillian Guild, slain in her W. C. A. hotel room, was believed to have committed his second brutal crime within five days.

JURY HEARS AL. JR. Smith Complainant in Extortion

New York, May 15 (AP).—Alfred E. Smith, Jr., appeared before the county grand jury today as it began consideration of his complaint that he was the victim of an extortion plot.

Shortly before he entered the grand jury room John Markey, special officer assigned to the District Attorney's office, announced that Max D. Krone, operator of a private detective agency, had been arrested on Smith's complaint.

Smith who separated from his wife in 1932 alleged that he was in cash, some promissory notes and an automobile were extorted from him after he met a young woman on May 6, 1935.

The prosecutor's office announced its decision to present the case immediately to the grand jury after conferring during the morning with Smith and questioning Max D. Krone, who was arrested on May 6, 1935.

Smith was accompanied to the district attorney's office by a friend, Patrick J. Driscoll. They entered the office of Assistant District Attorney Harold Hastings while he was questioning Miss Pavlick.

It was indicated that Miss Pavlick, Markey, Driscoll and William Roy, a former New York city detective would be among the witnesses called before the grand jury.

Roy was a bodyguard to young Smith's father when he was governor of New York.

Got $10? Well, It May Be Phoney

If you have a $10 bill with Alexander Hamilton seemingly considerably more stern as he glances from the greenback-report it, because the bill is counterfeit.

Variants of the new counterfeit bill was sent out today by Federal officials following arraignment of John Bora of Brighton street, Boston, in Federal court on a charge of passing several bad bills.

He was held for a hearing. The new $10 counterfeit, serial service agents said, are numbered C852501A and are poor in workmanship.

CURLEY SCORES ON BUDGET

Governor Curley won another major budget victory today when the House, 118 to 113, increased the item for new highway construction from $2,600,000 to $2,800,000.

The House yesterday had rejected this increase, but today the members voted reconsideration and then increased the item.

The members yesterday had concurred in a Senate amendment reducing the item for highway repairs and maintenance, to the budget.

The Democrats had protected that victory by promptly moving reconsideration and the billing reconsideration. Today the Republicans tried the same strategy on the highway construction item.

Representative Martin Hay, Republican of Boston, moved reconsideration. The members voted to reconsider and then passed the $400,000 increase. The strategy proved a bonanza. The House now has concurred with the Senate on both items.

'LONE WOLF' ROUTED Cambridge Prowler Scares Woman

A burglar, calling himself the "Lone Wolf," invaded the bedroom of a Cambridge woman today, threatened to shoot her if she screamed, and jumped out the first-floor window when a footstep in the hall frightened him.

Miss Gertrude Ellis, 52, a lodger at 11 Dana street, awoke shortly before daylight to see the man standing beside her bed.

She opened her mouth to scream but he stopped her, saying:—(Shut up) I'm the Lone Wolf. If you make a sound, I'll shoot you at that moment someone was heard walking in the hall and the man fled.

Miss Ellis telephoned the police and a cruising car was sent with officers to search the neighborhood but he could not be found.

He was described as about 25 years old, five feet six inches tall, and shabbily dressed.

MAYOR INSISTS TAX RATE WILL BE UNDER $42

Charging that the latest Finance Commission attack on him regarding the city budget was "unsound," Mayor Mansfield today assured taxpayers that the city would not have a $42 tax rate.

The commission had predicted this rate yesterday in a new attack on the mayor in which they charged him with misleading the public with false budget decreases and juggling of figures.

In a letter to the City Council, that body was requested by the commission to withhold final passage of the budget, voting only partial appropriations until all interested civil and real estate organizations have an opportunity to study the figures.

ANSWERS ATTACK

Answering this attack, Mayor Mansfield stated:

"The recommendations of the Finance Commission to the City Council disclose a surprising lack of knowledge of existing law and the financial calendar of the city."

"In that respect it is typical of Finance Commission reports. Under existing law tax bills must be made out on or before June 15 and it is necessary to have the tax rate declared on or about the first day of June."

"After the rate is declared the city is stopped from making additional appropriations. In other words the commission cannot delay adoption of a full and complete budget."

"REQUEST TOO EARLY"

"The commission complains that estimates of city departments were not made available. The only request came early in the year when figures were unsettled and estimates not immediately available."

"The commission was invited to renew its request, but never availed itself of the opportunity. And let me assure the taxpayers, there is no opinion there is no likelihood the city will have a $42 tax rate for 1936."

G-MAN KILLING HUNT NETS 7

Chicago, May 15 (AP)—Seven persons, seized as one of the greatest forces of officers since Dillinger's day combed housing halls, were questioned today concerning the slaying of Federal reserve agent John R. Foster.

They were apprehended in a series of raids on the houses of illicit alcohol cookers.

The names of those held were given as James Jacobs, alias Jones, 40, of Indianapolis; Joseph Krupa, 42, of Indianapolis; Mrs. Mary Robinson, 38, of Indianapolis; Vincent, 20; Joseph, 45, and Vincent, 45, of Indianapolis.

Federal officers said Jacobs' car bore Indiana license plates, contained 200 gallons of alcohol, a sawed-off shotgun and a number of rifle cartridges.

A rifle bullet ended Foster's life as he pursued two suspected rum runners near St. John, Ind., early today.

CONSTIPATED* 25 YEARS, ALL-BRAN BROUGHT RELIEF

Delicious Cereal Corrected His Condition

Here is Mr. Johnson's letter: "I got a package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and before the package was gone I was very much better."

"I have been eating it for two or three weeks, and my constipation has gone, and I was constipated for 25 years or more. Higher this may help some one to better health. I am a grocer."

"I am a grocer," Mr. J. B. Johnson, Lake Charles, La.

Mr. Johnson's letter is one of many. Millions find Kellogg's ALL-BRAN corrects constipation satisfactorily. It supplies the "bulk" missing in the average American meal.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is mild and effective. It absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Isn't it more sensible to use this natural food instead of taking potent medicines? Just eat two table-spoonfuls daily. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. It is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

*Const. due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

OVER 664 PARACHUTE JUMPS—the amazing record of Joe Crane (above), who has tumbled through 350 miles of empty air. "Camels set me right!" he says. "It's just natural for me to turn to Camels for digestion's sake. I'm a hearty eater, and Camels help me get more enjoyment from food."

AT THE MAYFAIR ROOM of the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit, Camels are outstandingly popular. In these surroundings, the fine tobaccos of Camels, their delightful flavor and lift, are a natural complement to perfect dining. Paul Fischer (right), whose genial touch adds a pleasing personal welcome to this smart and exclusive setting, has observed that Camels are the favorite and are steadily increasing in popularity. "A glance around our tables," he says, "proves that those who appreciate quality have made Camels their first choice."

METHOD AND PROCEDURE used in studying and analyzing the effect on digestion of smoking Camels shown above. Objective evidence obtained by scientists under controlled laboratory conditions definitely establishes the fact that smoking a Camel increases the rate of flow of the digestive fluids. The importance of this in facilitating the process of digestion is a matter of common knowledge.

A Candidate Reveals Himself

(Reprinted from the Chicago Daily Tribune of May 9.)

THE INTERVIEW with Governor Landon, heard on the radio Thursday evening, disclosed a number of things about the man, his opinions, and the quality of his mind which could not have been discerned so readily from a formal address. The interview, to be sure, was not wholly informal in the sense that it was extemporized. Mr. Landon undoubtedly knew what questions would be put to him. He must have gone over the ground carefully in advance. The question and answer method did serve, however, to enable Mr. Landon to speak easily and informally, as man to man, rather than as speaker to a public meeting. The radio interview is a novelty in presidential campaigning, but it is a natural development of the use of the radio for entertainment, and no doubt will be widely employed as time goes on.

Governor Landon showed that he is no panacea peddler. He does not believe in cure-alls, and if he nominated he will not seek election on a cure-all platform. He knows he lives in a changing world, but he does not believe that everything in America must be made over instantly. New conditions create new responsibilities for the government, but they do not warrant the scrapping of the American Constitution.

THE Governor sees abuses and is eager to correct them. He believes that monopoly is bad, and here his belief has plainly been formed by his own experience as an independent oil producer. The remedy for monopoly, he believes, is not more monopoly, such as Mr. Roosevelt has encouraged through his NRA, his Guffey Bill, and his latest tax bill, but more competition. Not business as such, but unfair business practices must be unprompted, in his belief. Governor Landon mentioned casually that he had been reading Professor Fetter's "The Masquerade of Monopoly." If Mr. Roosevelt had gone to the same book for guidance he would have avoided some of his most disastrous errors.

The government has a role to play in speeding recovery, the Governor holds. It must prevent needless suffering, and it can do so without destroying the government's credit and without using relief as a means of building up a gigantic political machine. Above all, the government can restore opportunity to those who are willing to work by restoring confidence in its own intentions and stability. It can go far to re-establish the self-respect of the men and women who at present are condemned to forced labor in Harry Hopkins' legion of misery.

"I, for one," he said, "am dedicated to the proposition that henceforth no American citizen shall ever again be put in a position where he has to sell his vote for bread."

GOVERNOR LANDON'S views on the Roosevelt Administration were particularly pointed. He finds merit in some of the ideas behind the legislation of the last three years, but he is convinced that the execution has been inopportune and blundering. Money has been wasted, time has been wasted by too much haste; there has been too much improvisation and too little painstaking thought. Much that has been attempted must be undone; much more must be revised, simplified and made workable.

The interview went far to promote the Governor's candidacy. He disclosed himself as a man possessed of common sense. He seemed in the interview to be patient, thoughtful, prudent, with a mind ripened by experience in business and in public life. He thinks and talks like an honest man, aware of his own limitations, but aware, also, of his proved capacity for meeting situations as they arise.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

World Belongs to Woman Who Has Intelligence To Remain Herself

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"This is a man's world. We women haven't a chance."

That is the substance of scores of letters I receive daily from discouraged wives and spinsters. Of course, I know how they feel and, hence, pity them with all my heart. But my advice to them is ever the same:

"The world can be a woman's world. It belongs to every sister who has the courage and intelligence to make the world HER world."

In truth, there are two worlds—one for men, the other for women. As long as one sex restricts itself to its own sphere, harmony will reign. Only when women tries to invade man's confines, or man woman's, does trouble begin.

We women never intended to drive trucks, plow fields, fight with swords, play baseball. And whenever we attempt to do these similar things, the only ones we fool are our poor, little disillusioned selves.

Mary is quite as ridiculous in the uniform of a mail carrier as John would be wanting a ruffled dress and crocheting underclothing for the baby. The effeminate man is bad. But the woman who tries to be a man is a thousand times worse.

Wise women never compete openly with men—that is, if they desire to become wiser and richer. They choose the path that rather than the manly one every time. If they thirst for freedom and "rights" they don't reject the thought of freedom in the presence of Brother and his friends. And above all they avoid displaying authoritative knowledge of sports, tasks and subjects which are generally considered man's own property.

A woman may have more brains than any six men in her circle, but the odds are 100 to 1 she will be the loser in the matrimonial race if she persists in giving proof to how much she knows. And here will be the trait of seeing that "dumb-bell" nature winning the marriage prizes while she goes her blind and lonely way.

DON'T COMPETE WITH MEN. BE YOUR OWN WOMANLY SELF. THAT'S MY TOPIC. REED IT AND YOUR WAY WILL BE EASIER. SMOOTHER. HAPPIER.

My five-dollar check for today goes to Miss M. B., who writes me this interesting letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am a young girl, 19, and I am fortunate to be in love with a young man of my own age. I would like to be married in June and would be very glad to be in my small salary.

Our marriage would be possible if I went to live with the widowed mother who has shown me every kindness. This, how-

VERITZEN'S CALL INTERRUPTS TALE

CHAPTER 18

AS MARY'S reproachful cry rang out, Noel started as if he had been struck, then as quickly recovered himself, and turned a determined face to hers.

"Why should I tell you?" he countered firmly. "Haden't you enough to bear with my unexplained absence without burdening you with this fresh instance of my father's lack of consideration for us?"

Noel Veritzen's Mary's voice held the time-worn note of white exasperation at husbandly obtuseness. Her voice was filled with generous scorn for the comfort for herself secured by sacrifice on her young husband's part, and Noel saw her as a young girl, even as he wearily protested her delusion.

HUSBANDS NEVER UNDERSTAND! "If you didn't tell me that my father was making life miserable for you with his criticisms of your work," he said.

"You've been in this game a lot longer than I have, and you know I'll win it," she said. "You get what I mean across to the—this—oh! I haven't an expression to fit it!"

She flashed a loving smile at her bewildered young husband, belying the amused contempt in her voice.

"I'm sure Noel will see what you mean, dear," he said, as soon as he had a chance to think things over. "You know as I do the wife who, when her husband comes home tired, begins at once to whine about the cake that fell and the rug the dog chewed, and all the other petty annoyances of the day instead of giving him the cheeriest welcome that will make him forget his own petty troubles."

STILL, NO LOVE.

"But I went on, warning to a favorite theme of mine, 'no husband or wife has the right to keep something big and vital, either of good or evil, from the other. Marriage should be a partnership, a comradeship, not an association where one bears the burdens alone, keeping the other in ignominious ignorance.'"

"I told you, Annie Madge, that you knew a lot of words," Mary murmured, her impish humor struggling with the very real gratitude in her voice. "Noel! I hope you're listening with both of your ears. This ought to do you a lot of good."

MARY! MARY! Noel protested. "You must not lo—" "I'm a hen, darling!" she said. "Don't mind a thing I'm saying. I'll do with you'd promise me not to keep anything big from me again."

VERITZEN PHONKS "I never was so contented," Noel said fervently, and for an instant there was silence as the two young things elude in each other, while across their unconscious head larks and if it changed glances of sympathetic commiseration.

There was something beside sympathy in Dick's eye, a quite pardonable complacency at the success in diverting Mary's mind from speculation as to the theory of the explanation of Philip Veritzen's behavior. Rather, it should be "out" theories. It hurt, for he was sure that in his husband's eyes he had been married an agreement with my own first wife's conjecture.

So absorbed was he in this, the first shadow that had clouded the lives of our loved young couple and her husband that he did not hear a knock sounding on the door. He was startled when Dick suddenly crossed the room. Then he flung open the door to disclose Katie, who, with excitement, as she always is when she senses some unusual situation in the farm house, fully.

Relief for Headaches

There is one human ailment that few of us escape. Annual headache suffers from an occasional headache.

Of this ailment, the sufferer is to this symptom, some persons are at times unable to work.

No matter how much the sufferer is distressed, it is not a disease, but a symptom of some other ailment.

For one who is afflicted with this ailment, it is a relief to know that it is not a disease, but a symptom of some other ailment.

What it does to your teeth is another matter. Those who have already acquired a satisfactory tan and feel that a foundation lotion is unnecessary will be impressed with what the copper lipstick, rouge and nail polish will do for their tan.

And those who want the tawny glamour of a golden tan but haven't the patience or opportunity to acquire it will find it a particular blessing. One of the best "eat your cake and have it" systems, because with this make-up you can keep your lips white as for next fall yet look as glowingly tanned as a true sun-worshiper.

Poor Harry, who answered the phone, is politely trying to keep up his end of the chatter. But he's had Fred if he'd known it was Gerie calling. He had hoped it was Sue.

Last time Sue called she said, in that soft, delightful voice of hers, "This is Sue, Harry. Have you a minute to talk? I wanted to tell you that the new sister carpet for the church has come. There's a call for volunteers for Saturday. Count on you? That's all!"

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Let me make amends for mentioning the Wells film so late by writing of a new film that begins today, while it is still new film. It is called "The Dancing Pirate" and there are reasons why I am interested in it.

In the first place it is nearly 20 years since a good friend of mine, Ernest Westcott, gave me some tickets for the first showing in Boston of a new kind of colored film called Technicolor. He was very much interested in it because his brother was a member of the firm Kalmus, Comstock and Westcott, that was working very hard on a new kind of colored picture. The company hoped to perfect another kind of experimentation in color and thereby make the kind of color work hitherto exemplified by such earlier pictures as the Indian Durbars, George V's trip to the Indian coronation pageant, etc.

These earlier pictures were shown largely in theaters and given and taken with plenty of out-of-door natural colors but with little sense of the deeper colors produced under artificial lights such as we may enjoy today.

Old Sea Captain And Pretty Blonde

I remember almost nothing of that first Technicolor film, except that it was taken out of doors, still had considerable traces of lettuce green and bright red with the edges overlapping, and had something to do with an old sea captain and a pretty blonde girl and plenty of sand dunes and blue sea water and a schooner under full sail and an American flag flapping brilliantly at the mast head.

But twenty years ago I was a miracle and we accepted it as such. Kalmus, Comstock and Westcott were a Technology crowd and remained a Technology crowd for many years. But the man whose genius is largely responsible for the artistic use of the perfected color as we know it today, was a Harvard man.

He it was who designed the color film "The Cuckoo" the "Rocky Sharp" film with Miriam Hopkins, and the present picture of old Spanish California called "Dancing Pirate," the third important use of these colored treatments. He was a Harvard boy of the class of 1910. He came from Union, New Hampshire. His name was Robert Edmund Jones. He earned his way through college by working at window dressing in Boston department stores—Conrad's I think and R. H. Stewart—for he had a superb sense of color even then. Later he was an assistant in the department of Fine Arts at Harvard under Martin Mower.

Through the generosity of Mabel Dodge, now Mabel Dodge Luhan of Tucson, New Mexico, he was enabled to study abroad under Reinhardt. When Granville Barker came over to put on "Androcles and the Lion" and "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife" he had his first chance to decorate an American play.

Best Sense of Color Yet Seen in U. S.

Then came Arthur Hopkins, John Barrymore's Shakespearean effects, the Metropolitan Opera House, and of late years, the chance to design and decorate the first important Technicolor film, "The Cuckoo," and so to lead up to the interesting work we are seeing today, "The Dancing Pirate."

His is one of the most interesting senses of color yet seen in this country. When I think back and compare the sort of thing he is doing today with that first amateurish out-of-door natural color film of twenty years ago, the new effects Jones has succeeded in producing during the past few years seem unbelievable.

I remember the thrill of a decade ago when in the midst of the really admirable film called "Ben Hur," with its great chariot race sequences, we saw one brief sequence, a bare few minutes, showing a Roman procession in bright colors.

Then we dared hope that we should one day see a whole film in color. Today that hope is a reality, partly because of the technical genius of these Technology engineers, and partly because of the designing and production genius of Robert Edmund Jones. I confidently expect that the picture of the future will be entirely, and, as a matter of course, in color.

UNCLE SAM WRITES A CHECK

70,000 WAIT BONUS CASH

100 Millions To Be Paid In State BUREAU TOILS DAY AND NIGHT

Uncle Sam will write a check for $50,000,000 on June 15, the money to be paid over to some 70,000 Massachusetts World War veterans who have made application for payment of their bonus certificates. In preparation for the big payoff, Colonel William J. Blase, administrator of the Veterans Bureau for New England, heads a day and night fight.

Harold E. Kiley, finance officer for the bureau, says that the bureau is now working three shifts of 24 hours a day, would have every application cleared and ready for payment on June 15.

Kiley stated that the bureau had notified him that he had to be prepared to handle more than 100,000 applications in that week of payment by the government of their property.

DETAILS OF WORK In order to portray a picture of the job, handled by the Veterans Administration, a candid camera took a trip through the bureau.

First the applicant is taken to the bureau. The application is then heard by the registrar and the registrar's office. The registrar's office is a very busy one and the registrar is a very important person.

RECHECK APPLICATIONS It is then that the application is rechecked by Elizabeth Crowley and others. It is then that ten duplicates of the report on each veteran is made and sent to U. S. Treasury Department.

GIRL

ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Robin Hood and his Merrie Men shook the dust of England from their boots a long time ago. They disappeared through a thick curtain and emerged as expert bowmen. Robin made them part of literature.

Today he pleased to make a literary in a new way. He is now taking the lead. Archery enthusiasts at Wellesley, Harvard, Smith, Jackson and Boston University have taken up the practice of the ancient art. In New York, the city is now getting at the Social Register without the ability to make a bullseye. Even the school has heard of it.

It was about 60 years ago that Edward Frenz, 73, of Melrose, started making bows and arrows, and the revival affects him like second youth. Bowed sticks and stringing strings that send the arrow straight and true are part of his life. He is in favor of the sport, and particularly for young women. He thinks it adds both strength and poise.

Archery is not an expensive pastime. An outfit for an individual or small group costs $25 and upward. In Robin Hood's day, yew was the wood used. There is very little here. In these parts, they use lemonswood, hickory and osage orange. Arrows are commonly of birch or pine. Targets consist of straw covered with cloth.

Feathering the arrow is the most important part of the archery art. Three goose or turkey feathers from the same side of an individual bird are required.

"Yankee Dimes" in Real Money Paid by Beauty Ten cents a least. And how many men on the train would kiss her for nothing!

Every morning at 8 o'clock, a very pretty girl accompanies a studious young man into the subway station at Harvard square, lingers a moment, bestows a parting salute on the lips and surreys out. The train lunges on. The kiss costs her one dime, for that's the admission to the subway.

Can you remember away back when the well dressed man wore a white shirt and collar? If you can, you've dated yourself.

Wild coloring is coming in this year. The men are color-conscious. If you encounter a man friend disrupting the quiet of dead Commonwealth avenue with a shirtfront resembling a California sunset, he'll only be following the style.

George von L. Meyer, socialite, likes bright blue shirts. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., goes in for checked plaids. Henry Cabot Lodge likes blues. Lucius Beebe, Boston-born Manhattan journalist, is likely to show up in any color. Representative John La Salle, favors blacks. Rudy Valley, former now playing at the Metropolitan, leans toward bright shades.

World's Biggest Watch Built by Experts

A time piece that would be a fitting pocket watch for a man about 60 feet high has been brought to town and is being displayed in the window of A. Stowell & Company, jewellers in Winter street. It's said to be a 14, 10 times enlarged, of a Gruen watch. Even the tick is 10 times louder. Each of the 104 parts is in scale. Some of the most skilled workmen in the world were called in to make it.

Poetry groups have been formed by the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs during the last year. Prizes for outstanding efforts will be awarded during the convention that opens at Swampscott on Monday.

Next year, poetry clubs will be established. Amateur versifiers will be given not only encouragement but expert criticism. Behind the movement is the idea of a poetry of women who have poetry in their souls. The technical skill to put their songs on paper, and the world is the loser thereby. Mrs. Harold Scheffe of Belmont is chairman of the committee in charge of literature for the federation.

'The Charlestown Murder'

New England Police Stories As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Fate's Hand

OFFICER HAROLD B. McINNES
Fate took a hand after Patrolman Harris B. McInnes was slain. A suspect was killed in an auto crash and second crippled. The second, Walter Perry, was brought back to Boston, where he was sentenced to prison.

Few Clues

More important was the finding of a double-breasted blue suit, size 38, either new or used, and a pocket where they had been dropped by the fleeing pair.

A second patrol was found by the first.

Then came what police believe to be the car, parked in a vacant lot.

Four men, three of whom were found in major

Most important of all was the fact that it is a recessed cylinder with a waxen drug inside. He theorized that he had been drawn to robbery and is a result murder because of his intense craving.

But the failed even before the arrest of the pair with the discovery that the dropped suitcase containing had been purchased in the West End.

It was a brown suitcase with initials Y. A. N. on its side. It had been among the possessions reported missing by Wing Lee a police officer said it was used to carry off articles of clothing.

But in the next few days there were several other airplane mishaps that brought nothing.

But on the previous Thursday there had appeared a story in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, then daily, which was to prove the break.

The story had urged all rooming house proprietors to be on the lookout for a brown suitcase marked Y. A. N.

Annual Bears Fruit

On the 11th police persistence was rewarded when two youths came to claim the piece of luggage. Their arrest and severe grilling followed.

Now the search shifted quickly to New York for two disreputable suspects, Walter Perry and George Collins. Three Boston officers were dispatched to New York but returned empty-handed.

Circulars were sent out to every city and town in the country and for days the press buzzed with false rumors of the whereabouts of Perry and Collins.

The Three Strikes

Adventurer Bats While Fate Hurls Fast Ones at Him

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

George Codrane, of New Haven, Conn., thinks he rates a membership in the Adventurers' Club. He has his claim on good grounds, too. He says he has faced death more times in one day than the average fellow in everyday walks of life. Well, I'm inclined to think George is right about that. George looked the old Grim Reaper in the eye exactly three times on this particular day he's talking about, and I'll bet that third time, the old man with the scythe heaved a sigh of resignation and said: "What? You here again?" It's a fact, boys and girls, George knocked on Death's door so many times that day that he made a nuisance of himself.

It was on December 24, 1934, that George started out his all-day battle with the ice. It was just about the first good cold day since the New England winter, and a lot of the boys were out skating. One of the boys was a friend of George's, and they climbed the ice to get to Miller's Pond. They found the ice fairly good, and a pretty decent skating condition.

They skated about an hour, and then George's friends decided to quit. But George stayed on for one last spin around the ice, and that was the act that set the old adventure ball a-rolling.

He had gone about half way around the pond, when suddenly, without warning, the ice gave way beneath him, and he was thrown down into the icy water. "I was chilled through in an instant," he says. "I hit bottom and tried to rise to the surface, but to my horror, I found that both my skates had become entangled in the weeds that covered the bottom of the pond. I bent down to disentangle them, but in my panic, only succeeded in making matters worse. Things seemed to be growing yellow, and then black voices began calling to me to stretch out my arms. They called two or three times before I realized it was my friends trying to help me."

George's friends were in a panic. They were all in the water, and they were all trying to help him. They were all trying to help him.

HANEY ON "GREENBACKISM"

Proposes Ending OF ALL INFLATION IN 'Pressure Relief'

By LEWIS HANEY (Professor of Economics, New York University)
New York, May 15.—In voting down the Frazier-Lemke bill, the House has killed greenbackism. It has dealt a blow to the idea of giving our money away in a particular class as "relief."
The question now arises: Why not keep up the good work? Why not go ahead and kill all inflation, and all distributions of our money that are not strictly necessary to relieve real need?
These two practices go together, for inflation is resorted to chiefly as a means of making "stage money" to hand out to various "pressure groups."

Who started the present inflationary move? The Hoover administration began to let down the bars, with its Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Federal Farm Board, and rubbering at the Standard for our money. Then the Roosevelt administration ran away with the idea.

It both devalued the dollar and abandoned the gold standard, thus making its "federal reserve notes" no better than greenbacks. It has made all of us, through our government, debtors, by borrowing at the banks and issuing billions in checks which are no better than greenbacks.

It has put its notes, which are almost non-interest bearing, into the banks, thus "creating" deposits which are the basis for checks (deposit currency) that are no better than greenbacks.

How much better than greenbacks are its silver certificates? They say that deposit credit is easier to "control." That remains to be seen. I doubt that it will be any easier than it would be to control issues of greenbacks. (The very fact that they cannot make deposit credit circulate is evidence that they will not be able to make it stop circulating, once it starts.)

Why not go ahead and kill all the wasteful spending and distribution of our funds by the bureaucrats?

Who started the move to "lighten the burden of debt" the Roosevelt administration did. It was under this slogan that they went ahead with inflation, borrowing, farm bonuses, organization of unproductive "work relief" armies, artificial lowering of interest rates, and other devices for destroying our savings.

One idea in the Frazier-Lemke bill was to make farm owners out of farmers who couldn't pay for their farms to give farms away. Well, is that any worse than the attempt to make laborers out of men by giving them "work" to do that does not pay—giving "wages" for bondholding? Is it any worse than giving people "cheap housing" that they cannot pay for? Is it any worse than sinking our savings in unproductive "public works."

Organized labor helped to defeat the Frazier-Lemke bill. Why, then, should organized labor defend a 30-hour week or other schemes for giving labor income that are not earned? Why can they not see that inflation of any kind endangers their real incomes?

The whole show has come down to an effort by selfish "pressure groups" to get something for nothing. And it all has the same outcome, namely the destruction of our savings by taxation and by inflation, both of which kill thrift.

Now that the different kinds of inflationists are at odds, and the New Dealers, Coughlinites, and Townsends are clashing—to say nothing of internal struggles between Licks and Hopkins—is it not a good time to call a halt to the whole process of dividing up the carcass?

REPORT DENNETT Warnings of TRADE IMPOST

RETAIL SALES RISE

By Associated Press
New York, May 15.—An expansion of trade under the influence of warmer weather was found today in the survey by Dun & Bradstreet for the past week.

"The first hint of summer brought the long-awaited impetus to waning sales of slower moving trade divisions into greater activity," it was reported.

Retail sales rose rapidly during the week, the expansion of demand extending to both staples and seasonal items, in spite of the unevenness in the rate of gain.

Wholesale markets turned more active, as producers were generous for early summer goods and more advance commitments were released. Even though some of the heavy industrial orders slowly away from their recent highs, manufacturing operations generally moved upward.

Reversing the trend of the week preceding, retail sales moved ahead again for the week ending May 13. The week ending May 13 was a type of seasonal merchandise, with the improved demand particularly strong for men's and women's apparel.

The report showed that various cities gained from 8 to 25 per cent in sales over the previous week, and the average for the country as a whole was 6 to 10 per cent higher than for the corresponding week of 1935.

In virtually all branches wholesale buying was larger in volume than for the week preceding, the report continued, with lightweight clothing and summer wear outstanding, as retailers sought to meet the rising tempo of consumer demand.

"Our federal extravagance and laxity in the handling of our money," Mr. Dennett added, "is the needless waste, experimentation and political graft, and the government competition with private industry, that are largely responsible for the present federal deficits. The federal government cannot meet its present rate of expenditures without resorting ultimately to printing more money, imposing taxes that will be confiscatory in character, or broadening the tax base and placing further heavy burdens of taxation upon the people of moderate means—thus reducing their purchasing power."

President Roosevelt warned against such dangers in his message to Congress in 1935, when he stated in Pittsburgh:

"Our federal extravagance and laxity in the handling of our money," Mr. Dennett added, "is the needless waste, experimentation and political graft, and the government competition with private industry, that are largely responsible for the present federal deficits. The federal government cannot meet its present rate of expenditures without resorting ultimately to printing more money, imposing taxes that will be confiscatory in character, or broadening the tax base and placing further heavy burdens of taxation upon the people of moderate means—thus reducing their purchasing power."

Special attention is directed to the fact that the two things for which I am arguing are precisely the things that were specifically mentioned by the President of the United States; they were all contained in the Democratic platform, and they are the things for which the people voted by an overwhelming majority in 1932.

They are specifically a reduction in the cost of government, a balanced budget and sound money.

The cost of government, a balanced budget and sound money.

DEFICIT CAUSES POINTED OUT

Atlantic City, May 15.—Carl P. Dennett, Boston banker and chairman of the executive committee of the National Economy League, addressing the 16th annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks here today, warned of the dangers of hidden taxation and its effect on savings.

Mr. Dennett asserted the administration has persistently declined to warn the country of the dangers of hidden taxation and its effect on savings.

The increase is presumed to reflect balances acquired in London. The New York against gold markets, however, is shipping out. Therefore, observers suggest a large proportion of the flow of gold from the United States is being shipped out rather than private arbitrage operations.

The bank lost nearly $1 billion francs in gold, or about 40 per cent of its total stock. The previous week's reduction equaled 18 per cent. Hoarding in France continued at a tremendous rate, distributed through the government, 2 1/2 billion francs in gold, commercial bills discounted at the central bank.

France has now lost all the gold she received following the abandonment of the gold standard in 1936. In Britain in 1931, President Hoover said that the gold standard was a "great evil" and that the United States should "get out of it."

Further evidence of the flight of capital from the franc appears in the record high circulation in England of the 100 franc note. In the week ending May 14, the Bank of England statement discloses a jump of $14,000,000 to a total of $24,700,000. At the same time, the bank's gold reserves were reduced to the highest in its history, aggregating $205,102,000.

FARM VALUES DROP

Real Estate Taxes Off

This chart shows the average value of a farm operated by owners in the United States in 1930 and the same farm in 1935 classified according to geographic divisions of the country.

A comparison of farm values is difficult due to the varying sizes of farms in each division.

Farms in New England, Middle Atlantic, East North Central, South Atlantic, and East South Central average 90 acres.

In the West South Central and West North Central farms average 230 acres. The Pacific section farm has the largest acreage with only 185 acres. The Mountain States have the largest average over 641.

The chart shows graphically how farm values have dropped in the last five years. The Pacific and West North Central states suffered the greatest depreciation in farm value, amounting to over $600 per farm.

The broken line on the chart shows the course of farm real estate taxes per acre from 1914 to 1934, the latest figures available.

Beginning in 1914 the index climbed rapidly until 1920 and then increased moderately until 1934. Coincident with the depression and depreciated farm value, taxes have declined.

Foreign Buying of U. S. Stocks Halts
Foreign buying of American securities which has been an important source of demand on the first of the year, is understood to have come to a dead halt in past two weeks. Quarters informed of the movement of foreign capital into the United States indicate a "wash" in buying and selling of securities here for foreign account this month. This means operations have practically balanced. Although it is difficult to judge from these indications whether foreign liquidation of American securities has shown a decline, it is clear some time past the movement of the buying side of American equities.

PREDICT Real Estate BOOM

BETTER DAYS FOR OWNERS

By Mervyn Stanley Rukers (Copyright, 1936, by University Service)
New York, May 15.—A pamphlet off the press today, which might be described as a text on "the care and feeding of landlords," brings more solace to the property owners than to the renters.

Roy Wenzick, of St. Louis, consultant in the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in his new volume entitled "The Coming Boom in Real Estate—And What to Do About It," addresses data and charts with which to arm the landlord which he sneaks up on tenants with the sombre suggestion that he invest in a hedge against what Mr. Wenzick can give to the harassed renter, and for a time may make coming through becoming his own landlord.

Until only yesterday, the landlord had been kicked around like a football by the renter. The renter's demands for rent reductions, and for a time may make coming through becoming his own landlord.

The economist of the landlords, in submitting a brief for an "improving turn," submitted 13 alleged reasons for a coming real estate boom.

In the author's own words, they follow:

1. Business is getting better after a great depression.

2. Delayed marriages are taking place.

3. The stock-to-the-city movements are replacing back-to-the-farm movements.

4. The number of buildings in most cities increased through the depression.

5. The population of the United States has increased.

6. A housing shortage is imminent.

7. New building cannot be completed quickly enough to keep up with the demand for housing.

8. Building costs rise, new buildings will be more difficult to reach high proportions quickly.

9. The housing shortage will make rents rise rapidly.

10. Lower vacancies and higher rents will cause values to rise.

11. Foreclosures will be very low.

12. Mortgage money will be plentiful.

13. The building boom.

Regarding the last point, the author argues: "By this time, the renter will have eliminated until they equal or exceed the value of the building. The profit this offers the speculative builder is so great that new building will boom in proportions in a very short time. It is the peculiar fact that in the early phases of a building boom vacancy does not increase. The increased property which a building boom generates with its tremendous consumption of many basic materials and its demand for factory and building labor, causes the demand for housing accommodations to increase faster than the supply can be increased.

"Only after the boom has continued for several years does an increase in vacancy become apparent."

This column bears relation to Mr. Wenzick's conclusions primarily because they see a fresh view of the real estate market to the long prevailing contentment concerning the plight of real estate.

Boston Wool Mart Buying Broadens

With buying apparently broadened within the past few days, the principal topic of discussion in the wool market was the reported activity in several western and Pacific coast states. Purchases were apparently largely for dealer accounts.

An occasional lot was reported sold to mills or top makers, but the bulk of the business was reported being paid as high as was reported being paid in the West by Boston dealers.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, May 15.—Official foreign co-operation in support of the franc during the recent crisis receives apparent substantiation in the Bank of France statement for the week ended May 8.

Sight balances abroad climbed from 5,000,000 to 271,000,000 francs, the highest total in a year.
